SUPERVISORS TURN DOWN ATTY'S BILL

W. F. Wise Presents Bill for $800 in Beer Running Cases; Payment Refused

BOARD SERVES ULTIMATUM

There was a hot time at the meeting of the board of Supervisors of Lake County last Saturday morning when Attorney Wm. F. Weiss appeared before the board for the purpose of putting up an argument and induce them to allow his claim for $800, for services in the beer running case. The board adopted the report of the judiciary committee which included Weiss' bill for $800, and a bill from T. Forby for $200, for legal service. They refused to allow these two items and other bills in connection with the beer cases were laid over to the March meeting.

Weiss then addressed the board and a hot debate followed. Weiss insisted that he had been ordered to go to Zion by States Attorney Welch, who explained that he was unable to handle the cases and had to have assistance. In his argument Weiss said "I did not question his right to engage me and I went there in good faith, I suggest that the bill be taken before Judge Edwards and I am willing to abide by his decision as to the legality of my claim."

The bills not allowed were:
Theo. Fabry, legal services, $200.54
Wm. Weiss, legal services, $800.00
Bills laid over to the March meeting were:

Jos. L. Bishop, Justice fees, $1,136.24
A. F. Gilman, analyzing beer, $46.63
Ralph Hemmick, services, $23.70
Jas. H. McQueeney, detective work, $1,013.72

Isaac Parry, watchman at garage over beer in Zion storage, $345.28
G. M. Stried storage of beer, $472.50
Jas. G. Welch, expenses, $607.12

Egar felt the bill of Weiss at $50 per day was excessive and that if the board allowed it, it would mean that other court house employees would demand a raise. He pointed out that when Mr. Welch appeared before the supervisors and asked them to pay Wm. Deane as assistant States Attorney the sum of $2,400 a year that he, Mr. Welch, promised the board faithfully that the office could handle all legal matters in the future without outside help.

Paddock agreed with Egar and said that Welch had ignored the chairman of the board by hiring detectives, lawyers etc, without complying with the board's order that he must consult the chairman of the board before doing so.

Mr. Paddock in no uncertain terms protested against the board adopting a motion to notify Welch that no bills of the kind would be allowed in the future. He said in order to call a halt we must refuse to pay the bills.

Crapo and Chase Webb of Antioch agreed with Paddock. Crapo said: "If you promise the baby a licking and never give it to him you lose control of him; the same way with this board. It tells Welch to do one thing and he does another and then we come back and pay the bills. That encourages him all the more to continue breaking the rules of the board, and by the way, the attorneys of Lake county have broken faith with this board more than any other class of people. Take for instance the law library to maintain and broke faith with us."

Bairatow insisted that the committee had made its report and that he was willing to back up that committee to the fullest extent. He admitted with Crapo that the attorneys had broken faith with the board a number of times, especially with reference to the law library which there promise. In the course of his talk, Mr. Weiss said $3,200 had been paid over already to the county by Zion beer runners and that represented about a half; the balance of the cases are pending and the county will get the money later.

Dep't of Agriculture Advises on Farm Leases

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Beginning about this time every year, between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 men in the United States are thinking about leasing or renting land. All that thinking results in between 2,500,000 and 3,000,000 contracts between landlord and tenant. For a year, or two or three years, or longer, those men must live and work under those contracts. The form of the contract, says the United States department of agriculture, affects not only the prosperity of the contracting parties but the comfort and happiness of themselves and their families. A poorly considered lease is likely to result in friction and frequent removals. A well-considered lease is a sort of insurance policy against quarrels and tends to increase the length of time that the landlord and tenant operate together, a condition, according to the department, that is greatly to be desired.

There are a great many things to be considered in every lease. The economists in charge of land economics in the office of farm management, department of agriculture, have made out a list of points that every man who has ground to lease and every man who wants to lease ground may need to consider. Although this list is long, it is, nevertheless, not to be taken as being so complete as to cover every feature that may deserve consideration on any specific farm. On the other hand not all of them will need to be considered by the parties to any one lease, but they serve as reminders, and those that are not pertinent in any particular cases need not be considered.

The list follows.

General Features.

Date of agreement.
Names of the contracting parties.
Name of the farm, its boundaries, and location in state, county, township and section.

Date of beginning and ending.
Provision for renewal.
Date by which renewal is to be made or notice to quit given.

Statement field or cropping system or rotation to be followed.
Map of the farm showing rotation and field system.

Plan and purpose of farming and of leasing.

Principles underlying the rental bargain.

In whom the management of the farm is to rest.

Manner of settling differences, by arbitration or otherwise.

Enforcement of provisions.

Yielding of possession in event of default, failure to observe agreements or at termination of lease.

Witnesses.

Sealing and recording (in some states) if the contract is for longer

JUDGE BARNES DECISION OPPOSED

Supreme Court Renders Decision that Beer Trucks Cannot Be Destroyed

REMAINDER OF ACT IS VALID

When Circuit Judge Charles P. Barnes directed the sheriff of McHenry county to take the truck which was used to carry eleven barrels of bottled beer to a point outside the city of Woodstock and burn it, together with its cargo after applying a quantity of inflammable oil, he met with an unexpected opposition.

Before his order could be carried out two parties made a fight for the possession of the truck, claiming ignorance of the fact that it was being put to illegal use.

These parties, Bertha Seimon and Robert A. Grace, scored a victory, when on Wednesday of this week the Supreme court held the search and seizure act constitutional in all its sections, except that portion relating to the confiscation of trucks engaged in carrying liquor. That portion was ruled invalid.

The case was taken to the Supreme court on an appeal from the McHenry County Circuit court by Harry Marquis who was convicted of transporting liquor containing more than 24 per cent alcohol. The truck he used was ordered destroyed. In ruling on the case the Supreme court said:

"Our conclusion is that the provision of the search and seizure act for the destruction of the intoxicating liquor and other property seized under the order of the court, without providing that notice shall be given to the owner or to the person interested in the property, does not afford due process of law and is a violation of the constitution. The statute having provided no lawful procedure for condemning seized property, the court was without authority to make any such order for that purpose."

Wm. Morgan Dies After Long Illness

One of Wilmot's most prominent business men, Wm. H. Morgan, passed away at his late home here Saturday evening, Dec. 13, following an illness of a year's duration.

Wm. Morgan was born in Kingston, Herefordshire, Wales, on Jan. 10, 1866. He emigrated to America in 1885, to Union Grove and remained there with the Griffith Monument Co. until 1891. At that time he became a partner of R. M. Dixon in a general store at Silverlake. After five years he sold his interests to Mr. Dixon and bought out the hardware store of B. H. Tabor at Wilmot and for the past twenty-three years has been a resident of this town. Always a progressive—and a self made man—he increased his business until it was easily the largest within a radius of fifty miles. However, his interests were never of a selfish nature for he was always a warm advocate and gave his unqualified support to all local improvements. The deceased was long treasurer of the Wilmot School Board and was instrumental in the locating and building of the high school here. He served as treasurer for the Township of Salem and was long a prominent member of the Eastern Star and the Wilmot Lodge No. 211 A. F. & A. M., for which he was treasurer for many years.

The deceased is survived by his wife and two daughters Ruth and Aileen.

Funeral services were held at the M. E. church Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 with interment at the Wilmot cemetery. They were conducted by the Wilmot Lodge A. F. & A. M., with Mr. Harrington of Elkhorn in charge of the impressive ritualistic ceremonies.

County To Pay $10,000

Deputy Fees

The board of supervisors last Saturday allowed the bill of $10,000 for the payment of deputy fees.

Insisting that the deputy sheriffs who served during the strike, were a unit in the position that they didn't care to take any money from the wire company and demanding that if they were paid at all Lake County as a county should pay them. A committee of deputies appeared before the Supervisors and with Wm. Sackman as spokesman explained their position as follows:

That the deputies were called out by the sheriff to preserve order and the wire works company hired and paid for its own deputy sheriffs who were employed by them to protect their own plant and that the deputies merely patrolled the streets to keep order.

As a result of the committee's visit a committee of supervisors will recommend that the board pay the entire bill and that the Wire Works will not be allowed to contribute anything toward that sum.

No More Applications Are Desired

Bureau of Internal Revenue officials say that no more applications for appointment in the prohibition enforcement service can be considered from Illinois. The number of applications in Illinois now on file is so great that the full quota of appointments can be made with well qualified men immediately. They say that it will be impossible for officers to investigate and report upon additional applicants.

First Rapid-Fire Gun.

In 1862, on November 4, Richard Gatling patented the first rapid-fire gun. In spite of its proven value, the Gatling gun was very little used during the Civil war, a conservative government clinging to the old-fashioned muzzle-loading cannon and rifles.

The Wisconsin Telephone Co. has cabled its wires underground on the main business streets of Watertown. All poles on some of the streets have also been removed.

Present indications are that no new court house will be built in Kenosha. A site has been purchased, but due to excessive costs the county board has refused to vote money to go ahead with the building.

Kenosha had another hold-up last Friday night when two men entered the saloon of L. S. Kimball, or dered sixteen patrons to line up along the wall and then went through their pockets. Some $300 was secured.

Ninety-two registered Holsteins brought $23,575 an average of $256, on the opening day of the annual fall sale of Holstein breeders at Fond du Lac. Sixteen counties of the Fox river valley are represented. Elsie Segis Dutchland, a 6 year old cow, consigned by Dr. M. W. Brach, of Hales Corners, topped the sale at $740.

Wisconsin Guernsey cattle will constitute part of the foundation stock being used to establish herds of pure bred Guernseys in Japan. The manager of the Tokia Dairy corporation visited Rosendale and inspected the Birchwood Guernsey herd, owned by M. L. Wells. Four calves were purchased at $1,750.

An exchange editor knew what he was talking about when he wrote the following: "When farmers are beginning to use 'ads' in their local papers to advertise their sales, the old-time storekeeper had better sit up and take notice. The farmer has developed into a businessman. He is not only an advocate of, but a believer in advertising. The fact that he advertises is conclusive evidence that he knows what other people's advertisements have meant to him."

Placed Dynamite in Ear, Lit Fuse, Awaited Death

The body of sixty-year-old Thomas Gray was found in his little shack at Port Weller, N. Y., he having apparently killed himself by sticking a dynamite cartridge in his right ear, attaching a fuse to it, lighting the fuse and lying down on the floor to wait for the explosion.

The cartridge was found sticking in his head, his head being partly blown off.
He had told fellow workmen that he felt bad and intended to blow himself up. He explained that he used to look after mules, and when they had to be killed the men would put a dynamite cartridge in their ear and attach a fuse to it.

Well Known Couple

Married Wednesday

Wednesday evening, Dec. 17, at the hour of seven o'clock Miss Louise Rothers became the bride of Mr. James Hamerhan, the ceremony being performed at the home of the bride's aunt in Chicago.

The bride is the only daughter of Louis Rothers of Grass Lake and has a wide circle of friends in this locality.

The groom is a well known young man who has made his home at Grass Lake for several years. They expect to make their home in Chicago for the remainder of the winter.

The news unites with their many friends in extending to the happy couple best wishes for future happiness.

To Give Orphans a

Real Christmas

One hundred and twenty-five orphans of the Lake Bluff Home for Orphans will be entertained Christmas in Wilmette homes. One orphan will be taken into each home for the day and will be given a Christmas dinner and gifts. Ralph Ambrose, a member of the wholesale advertising department of a loop department store, is father of the move. He conducted the scheme last year with the result that seventy-five orphans from the Lake Bluff institution got a real Christmas.

Poultry Flock Needs

Green Food

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

If the best results are to be obtained with poultry they must be furnished with a plentiful supply of green food. Where fowls have unlimited range on a farm they will secure green food during the spring, but during the winter it must be supplied for them. The question of how to supply the best feed at the least cost is one that each poultry keeper must decide largely for himself. It will probably make but little difference what kind of green feed is supplied, provided it is relished by the fowls. Cabbages, turnips, beets, potatoes, etc., are suitable for this purpose. The larger roots and the cabbages may be suspended by means of a wire or string, or they may be placed on the floor, in which case it would be well to split the turnips or beets lengthwise with a large knife. Potatoes and turnips should be fed cooked. The mangel is an excellent root for feeding raw. Cut clover soaked in boiling water fed alone or with the mash is good. Clover meal and ground alfalfa make very good feeds for this purpose. Where the fowls are yarded and not enough green feed is furnished by the yard, a small patch of clover, alfalfa or rape may be sown. Any one of these, if frequently mowed, will furnish a great quantity of green feed in a form which is relished by the fowls. Canada field peas may also be sown for this purpose, and when fed in a tender, crisp condition are eaten readily.

Gulf Stream.

The current of water through the ocean, which is commonly called the Gulf stream, is of varying width at different points. Its width, according to the conditions that influence it, may vary from 45 to 100 miles, and its course also varies slightly from time to time. In popular usage the name is often applied not only to designate the Gulf stream proper, but much of the oceanic drift of the north Atlantic.

Johnnie's Big Discovery
Johnnie stopped in his tracks to watch the maid stretch her sweater, which had shrunk in washing. "they stretch themselves."

Some Fur Everywhere
"There is hardly a farm," says one authority, "that will not produce at least fifty dollars worth of fur each season, especially at present prices. Trapping is a pleasant occupation for the farmer, and his boys in the fall after the rush of work is ended and aside from the time used in setting and tending the traps the money derived from it is all clear profit!"

THE HARVESTERS.

Many of America's most pleasing comedies on the stage, in the movies and on the entertainment platform have their beginnings amid rural surroundings. There is something about the country with its fields of grain, its orchards and its outdoor life which appeals to every one.

No time of the year in such surroundings is more picturesque and inviting than harvest time. It is amid just such scenes that The Harvesters appear in the initial setting of their evening's program.

An interesting story touching on both rural and city life runs through and binds together the entire production. Every song is introduced logically as an integral part of the sketch.

The story alone is so clever that it would score a success even without the music. The music would be a success without the story. But the music and the story combined are an exceptionally strong offering—unique, artistic and interesting.

The evening opens with the members of the company appearing in farm costumes and singing old-time songs.

While seated at the supper table a telegram is received. To make a long story short this message results in all three leaving the farm in response to what they consider an opportunity to develop their musical talents in the distant city.

Their various musical appearances in their new surroundings offer a setting for the presentation, in evening dress, of selections from the standard operas and other features of compelling interest.

Character readings in costume by Wilbur Beatty serve as an introduction to one part of the program.

Lively, up-to-date music, readings and songs comprise the finale. The entire program radiates the spirit of good humor.

The personnel of the company is especially well selected. The Harvesters having been organized and coached by Sandor Radanovits, noted Chicago producer, who has produced some of the strongest companies on the Redpath list.

You Can Get 210 More Eggs per Hen a Year

It is a recognized fact that average grain fed Hens form about 280 YOLKS per year. U. S. Government records show that only an average of 70 EGGS are produced out of this possible 280. Why? Because grain fed Hens lack the proper albumen or whites necessary to complete the eggs—thus a waste an average loss of 210 eggs per hen yearly. The missing 210 yolks which are never "shelled out" are absorbed into the Hen's system.

EGG-A-DAY Dry Mash fed Hens will produce as many EGGS as they produce YOLKS—which means an average of about 210 more eggs per Hen a year. EGG-A-DAY Dry Mash is a food that produces the necessary whites and shells to allow every yolk "to be shelled out" properly—instead of being absorbed into the Hen's system. EGG-A-DAY is most economical. Absolutely no waste—no mixing.

Coal's Uncertain History.
The story of coal is a very uncertain one. No one seems to know when it first began to be used for fuel. All through the centuries it pops in and out of English literature as something taken for granted, and when it was finally found well in the van of the great industrial expansion of a century or more ago it occasioned no special comment.

Quaint Baptismal Custom.

Crocodile's Record Swim.
How far can a crocodile swim? Perhaps it would be more practical to ask how far crocodiles do swim? J. Stanley Gardner claims the record for a crocodile (Crocodilus porosus) that recently landed in the Fiji Islands, where he took its photograph. No crocodiles of this species inhabit the Fiji Islands, and the nearest spot where they are known to live is the New Hebrides, 683 miles distant. Therefore, this crocodile must have swam 683 miles in the open sea.

CHAPTER VII—Continued.

There was something hideous in the glint of the man's eyes. As with Laynton, all veneer was gone now, and the grin on the heavy lips was an evil thing.

It brought the blood surging to Wallen's temples—and, receding, left his face a deadly white.

"Mott," he whispered queerly, "as God lives, I'll—"

"You stow your jaw, Mott," Laynton interjected, with a flippant laugh, "or you'll be giving Mr. Wallen an unfavorable idea of the discipline aboard here."

For a moment Wallen stared at Laynton without speaking—then the words came with a passionate rush: "You're mad!" he cried. "You're going to your own death—you're taking everyone aboard this ship to theirs. This Ram Gulab Singh will have means of communication with Singapore—by wireless, or cable, or some way, if even by ship, for you can't make more than twelve knots, and you could be outlasted almost two to one by anything that had any speed at all."

"I tell you you are running into a trap that you'll never get out of alive. And there's no treasure, and never has been except in your imagination."

"Ain't there?" breathed Laynton softly. "We'll see about that!"

Wallen stood motionless for an instant. There was something ghastly ironical in the complacency of the other smugly inviting his own death.

"What are you going to do with me?" he demanded abruptly.

"Nothing!" said Laynton airily. "Nothing—until we get there, except to give you a chance to see the real life aboard the ship and let you form your own conclusions as to whether you'd better open up or not."

"And then?" asked Wallen quietly.

"And then," said Laynton musically, "if you haven't pried your jaws open by that time, I'll take that eleven hundred dollars back and twice you up for a taste of the cat; and if that don't work I'll turn you over to the crew, you and that Indian pal of yours, and let them settle with you for the Kanaka's murder."

"You're mad!" said Wallen again.

"Here's a pleasant voyage to Arru—Mr. Wallen!" he said—and laughed as the liquor gurgled down his throat.

CHAPTER VIII.

Backs to the Wall.

"One, two, three, four"—Wallen counted the strokes.

Four bells! Six o'clock. Astern, in a wonderful glow of rose and pink-tinged clouds the sun was sinking; ahead, low on the horizon, but opening rapidly, like a penciled line on the smooth plane of the sea, showed the land—the coast line of Arru!

And away off to port, like tiny dots, he could make out a group of islands.

All the night before, all that day, figuring as accurately as he could by dead reckoning and the help Captain Laynton had unwittingly given him, he had calculated they would not do any more than just about sight Arru by four bells. He had staked everything on—four bells. So far he had been right! Was it a good augury—for what was to come!

Creeping past the corner of the wireless house on the starboard side, he caught the flutter of Gunga's loose white garments for an instant—and then he turned and looked aft. Always careful to avoid his proximity, Helen MacKay was pacing up and down the deck.

Would she never go below! He had waited until the last minute, risked more than he cared to contemplate that it might be supper time. Ordinarily she went below ten or fifteen minutes before meals, and he had counted on that too—that she would be below.

And now by some ironical perversity she appeared to be waiting for the supper bell to ring.

A jangled, drunken chorus of song rose from the forecabin; the discord disconcertingly assertive as a voice, a little more inebriated than the rest, attempted a mauldin tenor part.

Wallen glanced quickly at the girl. There was a look in her face that he had detected once or twice before in the three days that were gone when she had thought she was unobserved—a gray look, that brought a pitiful weariness to the eyes. Wallen's lips moved silently, grimly.

He smiled bitterly. Perhaps of her own accord; in another minute now, the next time she reached the lounging room entrance, she would go below—if he asked her to, she would probably only remain where she was!

Where was Gunga now? Laynton's cunning had been Machiavellian in allowing Gunga and himself a pseudo freedom after disarming them! They had had an opportunity to see—and there was no doubt about the moral status of the crew.

The Moniegh was a floating hell! The days and nights had been periods of blasphemy, rioting and drunkenness, until the soul was sick with it, until he knew that, falling to lead them to what did not exist, he would receive as short a shrift as would be accorded to a mad dog—until it must have rung terror and awful dread to her, the woman whose love he had thought he had awakened in response to his own, only to stand in her eyes as a blood-stained murderer, a scheming impostor, to be held as a fouler thing than the brutes around her, as the greater of the two evils!

But some things he could not understand. She knew—she must know—the peril in which she stood. No human being could be oblivious of that. And yet, for the first day at least following that scene in the wireless room, she had cultivated Mott more than ever.

There seeped only one explanation—a desperate hope that she might, in her extremity, have someone to depend upon, and was blind to the fearful irony of the fact that the man she chose was the one she had most need to fear.

She knew that they were no longer bound for Sumatra. She knew that Captain Laynton had lied when he told her to answer that message and state that he was returning at once to Singapore. She knew what Laynton was after, for, on discovering a few hours after that message was sent that there was no Singapore in sight, as there should have been if Laynton had put about, she had listened, if without comment, to Gunga's story.

As for the rest, the days had been each one like some grim specter hovering over him, gibbering at him—pointing at her. A sort of horrible facetious plesantry had reigned in the cabin. Captain Laynton was "coaxing" still. Each day he had offered Wallen suggestively the third officer's berth again.

On his plate at each meal he found the ship's position marked down on a little card.

The days, as Laynton had intended they should, had done away with all supposition or doubt on that score. And now they were off Arru and that "moment" was upon him, and—would she never go below?

From forward, under the bridge, Gunga peered cautiously around the corner of the captain's cabin, drew back as Helen MacKay turned in her restricted walk to face in that direction, and then she wheeled again, pacing toward the stern, he darted under the bridge ladder that was opposite and within a yard of the captain's door. The next instant he had slipped like a shadow into Laynton's cabin.

Wallen's hand upon the rail gripped tightly as his face set white and hard as chiseled marble. What would the next few minutes bring? Death—for himself and Gunga? Well, they were men; he dared to hope they were men enough to face it like men. But for her—it was not death; it was worse than death.

Laynton's words addressed to Mott that he had overheard the night before had rung ever since like doom in his ears: "You keep your paws off the girl until we've got what we want out of that masquerading swine, or I'll bash your face into jelly. He's sweet on her, and he's the kind of fool along those lines it ain't wise to stir up until we have to. You mind what I say, Mott! Afterward—"

Wallen hadn't heard any more; but it was almost that "afterward" now unless—his eyes were straining forward, and suddenly it seemed as though his heart-beat stopped.

Captain Laynton, starting abruptly to leave the bridge, stepped onto the ladder and halted near the top like a man stunned—as Gunga at the same instant emerged from the cabin.

Then, with a bellow of rage and the agility of a cat, Laynton swung himself under the handrail, leaping for the deck.

And Gunga's shout rang out: "Quick, sahib! I have got them! Run, sahib—run!"

A second sometimes spans an eternity; and it seemed to Wallen that he lived it then as he sprang across the deck. Mott, from the bridge, was hurling himself down the ladder.

Gunga was racing aft like a deer, with Laynton, screaming blasphemy, in pursuit. And Helen MacKay was standing as if turned to stone by the lounging room entrance as Wallen reached her.

"Run below!" he gasped out. "Quick! Into the saloon!"

She did not move. There was no time to speak again, to argue, to ask, to plead. He snatched her up into his arms and plunged through the doorway.

The sharp, vicious bark of a revolver shot echoed behind him; and Gunga called again: "Go on, sahib! Go on!"

She was screaming in his arms, pounding madly at his face with her doubled fists, struggling with all the strength of her lithe young body to free herself as he reeled and staggered down the companionway.

Shouts and the pound of racing feet along the decks came from everywhere now, fore and aft. A face loomed up before him as he reached the bottom and a form blocked his way. It was the French steward from Port Said. Wallen crashed into the man.

The steward went back against the bulkhead—and was hurled from this to the floor as Gunga, behind, with the spring of a wildcat, leaping from the top to the bottom of the companionway, struck him in turn.

A moment more and they were in the saloon, the three of them, and Wallen had set Helen MacKay upon her feet—and his back was against the locked door. Still another moment and Gunga was running back across the saloon carrying the door of Wallen's cabin that the night before they had loosened from its hinges.

It fitted, as their measurements had promised them it would fit, at a rigid angle, a solid, substantial brace, between the saloon door and the iron base of the swivel chair at the end of the dining table.

And now there was a rush along the alleyways and down the companionway, and a crash upon the door, a chorus of yells and oaths—another rush against the door.

Gunga was holding out two revolvers in his hands.

"They do not know yet that we are armed, sahib," he said grimly. "Shall I fire through the door—to kill?"

And then Wallen laughed unaccountably as he took one of the weapons from Gunga's hands. It had been for that that Gunga had gone to the captain's cabin. One they had hoped to get—and Gunga had got two. And this one was his own, and he had ammunition in plenty in his cabin that he had bought in Singapore, that they did not know he had. And he laughed again—and fired.

There was a sudden scurrying of feet to right and left along the alleyway without, a renewed chorus of shouts and oaths; but an abrupt, even surprised cessation of attack upon the door—though he had fired only at the floor.

He turned to Helen MacKay, where she was standing erect, white-faced, her hair, loosened in her struggle with him, streaming over her shoulders, one small white hand now holding her little silver-chased automatic at her side.

"Miss MacKay," he burst out, "please move to one side of the cabin. They are likely to start firing through the door panels from the top of the companionway, and you are in the line of fire, and—"

"The d—hound's hiding behind the woman's skirts—the yellow cur! Go on there—rush that door again!"

It was Mott's voice, raised in an infuriated yell.

But there was no immediate rush. Helen MacKay spoke.

"Behind the woman's skirts!" Her lips were curling, her voice low, the words a whiplash that cut to the raw. "So! Is that the reason for this?"

"By God," he cried hoarsely, stepping toward her, passion, bitter hurt, a mad insistence of his love upon him, that knew no barriers, no restrictions of time or place or circumstance, the cry of his soul for justice demanding utterance, "you shall not talk to me like that! And you will listen now—you will never have to listen again—but you will listen now. I love you! That is why I have done this. I love you!"

His lips were white, and the great form of the man seemed to quiver as with a sob. "Once"—his voice was quieter—"I had hoped to tell you that in a different way and I had hoped—but it does not matter what I hoped. Even if you loved me there could be no hope now."

Everyone must occasionally give the bowels some regular help or else suffer from constipation, bilious attacks, stomach disorders, and sick headache. But do not whip the bowels into activity with harsh cathartics.

What the liver and bowels need is a gentle and natural tonic, one that can constantly be used without harm. The gentlest liver and bowel tonic is "Cascarets." They put the liver to work and cleanse the colon and bowels of all waste, toxins and poisons without griping—they never sicken or inconvenience you like Calomel, Salts, Oil, or Purgatives.

Twenty-five million boxes of Cascarets are sold each year. They work while you sleep. Cascarets cost so little too.—Adv.

Illinois Folks Tell of Experience

Proport, Ill.—"I can highly recommend Dr. Pierce's medicine. While I have taken some of nearly all of these medicines at different times and they always were first-class, I can speak especially well of the 'Favorite Prescription.' I have taken it as a special woman's tonic and it was excellent. For several years I was in very poor health. I had doctor for some time without results and I was in a miserable state when I decided to write to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., for advice concerning my ailments."

"I am sure I owe my good health of today to Dr. Pierce, and perhaps my life, and I cannot say enough in praise of his skill and also his grand medicines."—Mrs. E. Scovill, 329 Elk St.

Galena, Ill.—"Some years ago I was afflicted with catarrh and liver trouble. My blood was impoverished and an abscess formed over my liver. I was in a serious condition when my husband brought me a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a vial of Pleasant Pellets and a package of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. My improvement was noticeable from the very start, but I took seven bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' so as to be cured and restored to perfect health."

"My sister also had a most satisfactory experience with the 'Discovery' which she took for an asthmatic condition. Two bottles of it absolutely cured her of asthma and for thirty-five years afterwards she continued praising 'Golden Medical Discovery' and recommending it to persons afflicted with asthma or bronchial affections."—Mrs. Hattie Moore, 518 Dewey Ave.

Chicago, Ill.—"I have taken Dr. Pierce's medicine for many years. It is a most reliable and effective remedy for all ailments. I have taken it for catarrh, liver trouble, and other ailments. It has always given me quick relief and I can highly recommend it to all who are suffering from these ailments."—Mrs. J. H. Smith, 1234 N. Dearborn St.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

Wage war on rats.
Save all by-products.
Have you named the farm yet?
The silo is no longer an experiment.
The gasoline engine is a labor saver.
Don't forget to save plenty of seed corn.

Soy beans are proving themselves worth while when planted with corn and cut with the corn and put into the silo.

Medicine by Inhalation.
That medicine for all diseases may be applied by inhalation is the conclusion of Dr. P. D. Schulz, of New York, after many years of experiment. Hitherto this method has been chiefly confined to anaesthetics and remedies for respiratory affections, but marked success is claimed for it in both digestive and nervous troubles. The medicine in liquid form is used to saturate a sponge, which is contained in a tube through which nitrous oxide gas as a "conveyor" is inhaled. Risk of chemical or other change from contact with food materials is avoided, and the medicine is absorbed into the circulation from the lungs even more readily than from the stomach, small doses sufficing.

Pollard and his wife and two children lived at St. Ives in the happy days before the war. At the outbreak of the conflict, however, he enlisted and served during the conflict on a trawler, hunting for German mines, until an explosion left him blind and paralyzed. A crippled man, he returned to St. Ives, and rejoined his family. Then there came another child.

They lived in a house on the wharf.

One morning smoke was seen issuing from the kitchen and bedroom windows of the house. Pollard's brother ran to give assistance and saw his sister-in-law at the window of a bedroom. He called to her to jump.

But she only shook her head, threw up her hands and went back into the room. Pollard was not seen at the time. Fortune saved the children, but the flames were not spent until the parents were lifeless.

"Could she have got out through the window when you called to her?"
the coroner asked the brother-in-law at the inquest.

"Yes, she could have come out through the window if she had wished," he testified. "But she evidently chose to die with her crippled husband."

Almost Too Good an Excuse.
Sarah was invited with her older sister to take tea with a friend of her mother. The little girl was anxious to do her sister credit, but after sampling a piece of cake which she had taken upon her plate was unable to eat it because she did not like it. Her hostess, noticing this, said: "Why, Sarah, you haven't eaten your cake!" Drawing a long breath and not wishing to hurt her friend's feelings Sarah replied:
"No, it is so good, I can't."

Life at Its Best.
To work, to help and to be helped,
to learn sympathy through suffering,
to learn faith by perplexity, to reach truth through wonder; behold this is what it is to prosper; this is what it is to live.—Phillips Brooks.

Woman Sacrifices Life With Husband Who Was Crippled
During the War.

London.—The story of Mary Lawry Pollard, who sacrificed her life in the flames because her husband, Edwin Chapple Pollard, a cripple, could not escape, has thrilled London. Both were killed by the fire which destroyed their little home on the wharf at St.
Ives. When the flames had been extinguished, the body of Mrs. Pollard was found lying across that of her husband.
